AMERICAN CLAIMS.

The Times says the attitude of the United States on the question of the Alabama is perhaps more important than the demands themselves. The correspondence opened in 1863 on the part of the United States, and nothing can be more courteous.

Mr. Adams and the United States desired to maintain the right of search, and have many counter-claims for the arbitrary enforcement of the right of blockade and search. These will have to be examined at the same time, and England is unconscious of hostile intentions in using them. She will decline to infer such intentions from the mere renewal of outstanding demands which she believes to be unfounded.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer delivered a speech at Chester yesterday in favor of the bill, and it is now safe for election to the next Parliament. The Chancellor expressed his favor of a wide extension of the franchise to the working classes, not as a matter of constitutional right, but in order to strengthen the laws and constitution of the country.

The treaty of commerce between Great Britain and the Zuluver was signed on the 31st.

Telegrams of May 29 had reached London. One mentions further disasters, but another is understood to speak of bank failures, and no one of both is very gloomy. It is added that all claims on Cam &amp; Co., not legally proved, will be rejected, meaning probably that the line of bargains will be thrown out.

The Daily News hopes peace will be extended; but does not discuss its continuance, but because the principle that the Federal Government represents is so admirably vindicated so triumphantly that nothing can be added. No punishment could be greater than failure, and merey would cause no regret in future years.The Times says after the ominous language of the President, we can no longer regard the case with confidence or uncertainty.
